

And the work in our shelter goes on....

All efforts in the fight for a stray-free island are shattered when a mother dog with puppies is found again. If the mother dog is not caught and neutered as soon as possible, then reproduction continues faster than you can think. It's like tilting at windmills. Animal Protection never gives up the fight.

In one region of Aegina, there is a pack of very shy free-roaming strays. The team at our shelter is doing everything they can to catch the animals and have them neutered. With a live trap we succeeded in catching at least one of the shy mother dogs. In the luggage are 8 sweet puppies.

The whole family could be secured and is now in a foster home until they are fully vaccinated. After that they will be taken in the shelter, further socialized and prepared for a life in a family in the best possible way.

We are only succeeding in this important task together with all of you, the volunteers, sponsors and supporters of Animal Protection. Please do not stop supporting us!

A name sponsorship can also help. We are looking forward to your requests for a name sponsorship.
