

A decision...

is not always easy. There are certainly many opinions. But we decided to give Edna - the dog with the operated mammary tumours - and her friend Vicky back into the wild.

They are now living back where we found them. Edna is now physically very well again, the wounds have healed. But we have noticed that she is not at all comfortable around other dogs, loud noises and especially around people.

We have thought long and hard about what is best for her and her friend Vicky. A placement would be out of the question. Both are too fearful and avoid the presence of people. So a lifetime behind bars in an animal shelter? No.

There is a family in their known neighborhood that has taken care of the two dogs before. This family will continue to do so. They were happy that the two will now live near them again. In a protected environment, far away from any hustle and bustle and road traffic.

Take care, you two. We will continue to keep an eye on you.
